Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Saturday 04 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Rather cold and unsettled but some places drier on Sunday.

This Evening and Tonight:
Clear spells and showers, these mostly in areas exposed to the northwest. More persistent rain and hill snow affecting some eastern and northeastern parts. Remaining windy but frosty in sheltered spots.

Sunday:
Further showery rain across some eastern areas, perhaps edging into central parts but dying out. Sunniest across western parts as showers fade. Winds easing but staying cold.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Band of rain moving east Monday, preceded by snow, mainly on hills. Wet and increasingly windy Tuesday, with coastal gales in the west. Staying windy with blustery showers on Wednesday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.